New Webcast: Cybersecurity and the Insider Threat

Cybersecurity is a key business risk today. According to a recent poll by the EU Intelligence Network, the global impact of cyber crime exceeds 3 trillion U.S. dollars annually making it more profitable than the global trade in marijuana, heroin, and cocaine combined. According to research reports, it is significantly more expensive to have a breach in Canada than anywhere in the world.

Insiders, like employees, third-party vendors, consultants and contractors, pose a growing and significant threat to cybersecurity. This webcast discusses the risks and challenges, the unique difficulties and concerns associated with identification and detection, and ways in which to manage the insider threat. The following topics are covered:

- Accidental/unintentional insider threats
- Malicious insider threats – detection
- Malicious insider threats – prevention
- Malicious insider threats – forensic investigations
- Cyber insurance issues
- Legal and regulatory costs

Our panelists are:

- Ali Arasteh, Director, Mandiant
- Craig Byrkit, Leader, Information Systems Threat & Vulnerability and Cyber Risk Management, Edward Jones
- Alex Cameron, Chair of the Privacy and Cybersecurity Group , Fasken Martineau Dumoulin LLP
- Roger Hacala, SVP Financial Institutions Practice Leader, Willis Canada Inc.
- Steve Hawkins, Chief Information Security Officer & SVP Information Security & Control, Scotiabank

The discussion is moderated by Suzanne Lasrado, Senior Manager, Financial and Operations Compliance, IIROC.
